"Penn's book is a mighty achievement. In Envisioning Islam, scholars at last have a one-stop survey of some of the richest but most poorly understood Syriac sources for the early Islamic period, paired with clear-headed analysis and sober conclusions. . . . Penn's book succeeds in defamiliarizing the early history of Muslim-Christian relations and will undoubtedly set the stage for future research on the topic." —

Envisioning Islam: Syriac Christians and the Early Muslim ...

The first Christians to encounter Islam were not Latin-speakers from the western Mediterranean or Greek-speakers from Constantinople but Mesopotamian Christians who spoke the Aramaic dialect of Syriac. Under Muslim rule from the seventh century onward, Syriac Christians wrote the most extensive descriptions extant of early Islam.

Envisioning Islam – Syriac Christians and the Early Muslim ...

Michael Philip Penn begins his book Envisioning Islam: Syriac Christians and the Early Muslim World with an excerpt from a letter by Jacob, the late-seventh-century Syrian Orthodox (" Jacobite ") bishop of Edessa, who recounted his solution to a distinctly seventh-century problem: Muslim raiders (" Hagarenes ") had seized eucharistic bread during a raid on Byzantine territory, and, unsure of how to dispose it properly, gave it to Jacob. The ecumenical gesture was somewhat misguided ...
